In recent years, AP students have been asked to consider how exile can be both alienating and enriching. Choose one of the literary works listed below and analyze how a character's experience with exile illuminates the meaning of the novel, play, or epic poem. Choose from the following:

The American by Henry James

Angle of Repose by Wallace Stegner

Another Country by James Baldwin

As You Like It by William Shakespeare

Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky

Doctor Zhivago by Boris Pasternak

Jane Eyre by Charlotte Bronte

Jasmine by Bharati Mukherjee

Jude the Obscure by Thomas Hardy

The Little Foxes by Lillian Hellman

Madame Bovary by Gustave Flaubert

The Mayor of Casterbridge by Thomas Hardy

My Antonia by Willa Cather

Obasan by Joy Kogawa

One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich

by Alexander Solzhenitsyn

Paradise Lost by John Milton

The Poisonwood Bible by Barbara Kingsolver

A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man

by James Joyce

The Road by Cormac McCarthy

Robinson Crusoe by Daniel Defoe

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead

by Tom Stoppard

Sister Carrie by Theodore Dreiser

Sister of My Heart by Chita Banerjee Divakaruni

Snow Falling on Cedars by David Guterson

The Tempest by William Shakespeare
